Shaman 5.0 out of 5 stars If you dont have any, Torx drivers are available via Amazon, order them while ordering your element. Once removed there were 3 Torx screws holding the element in place. The element supply cables simply unclip. Take care to replace them correctly on the replacement element. Also, take care not to let the cables slide down behind the oven while they are disconnected. Replace the backplate before testing. the element needs an airflow from the fan to keep its temperature within limits. Job took me about 15 minutes. Has now been in use for around 3 weeks and cooker is working as well as ever Given the low price I will probably purchase another just to hold as a spare incase I ever need to fit another one and cannot wait. Been my bargain of the last year for sure The original had a brass fixing lug which was different to the one supplied resulting in the need to fettle this lug otherwise it would foul on the fan. It also had an issue with the mounting bracket, the original was tapped whereas this was drilled straight through resulting in the need to purchase additional screws. I expected this to take about 45 mins to fit as previously with other ovens I have replaced, but overall must have taken 1.5 to 2 hours with all the fiddling about and going out for additional screws and its not like I have no experience with 45 years as an Electrician. Experience has shown that these third party elements dont last more than about two years, but even that doesnt justify the cost of an original NEFF replacement.

Fitting is easy for anyone handy with a screwdriver. There are videos on YouTube if you need some guidance. You need a torx screw bit 4 screws holding internal back panel and 3 holding element 2 wires on spade terminals on element really easy job total time 15 minutes now working perfectly REMEMBER switch off power for safety. Just hope this element lasts as long as original has for about 12 years! Ordered two paid extra postage for next day delivery the second normal slow mail. Easy to fix. Happy to report the first element lasted 4 years and 4 months. Good price for a compatible element. Second one installed hope it lasts as long however to be on the safe side ordered two more just in case. Given the price of Neff originals this seems a good alternative that said the original did last 10 years so fingers crossed. Exactly, nothing. Does exactly what it says on the tin, my daughter-in-law is a semiprofessional caterer and is very picky, she is very pleased indeed with this. Highly recommended. Das Original Ersatzteil sollte über 70. Euro kosten. Ich bin dann für knapp 10. Euro bei diesem Teil fundig geworden. Es unterscheidet sich in Aufmachung, Gewicht und Passgenauigkeit nicht vom Originalteil. Man muss jetzt mal sehen wie lange es halt. Im Moment funktioniert es einwandfrei. Aber für den Originalpreis bekomme ich sieben dieser Ersatzteile. Sorry, we failed to record your vote. Please try again Viel Geld gespart. Klare Kaufempfehlung. Sorry, we failed to record your vote. Please try again. See other heating element video tutorials for other appliance manufacturers. If so then it needs to be reset, but if every time you turn the fan oven on it keeps tripping then this could be a faulty element that has gone to earth. Is no sign of damage you will have to test with a meter. It is ok for toasting but that is about all. What ideas and parts do I need please Enough to roast Might it be indicative of a wider problem. Grill works fine. Many thanks. If I'm right, this presumably means that the fan setting is turning on the fan but not the heating elements. So does this mean the problem is in the main switch unit. Any help on this would be much appreciated. Been working fine. We had our fuse board replaced and now have an RCD which trips when we turn the oven on. Grill is fine. Oven doesn't trip immediately but after about a minute. The element has been working but I suppose it could be leaking to earth. But is that consistent with it happening only after a short while Fusebox was recently replaced and now it trips after 1 minute with the oven on but is fine for everything else light, fan, grill. How do you fix it please Been working fine. We had our fuse board replaced and now have an RCD which trips when we turn the oven on. Ask an Expert Home Improvement Questions UK Appliance Repair Hi. I have a Neff HM1140c induction hob and a HBBEP317 cooker, Customer Question both second hand to install. Hi. I have a Neff HM1140c induction hob and a HBBEP317 cooker, both second hand to install for a customer. Can these items be fitted to these units and run from the same 240v 45amp cooker outlet. Submitted 8 years ago. Verified Hiya, What is the power rating on the label of each unit. It should be marked in KW, Kw, W or Watts. The hob can run on the existing supply, you need to run a new, 2nd supply for the oven. The worktop is fine, its thinner worktop so the base of the hob may well project below the bottom of the worktop. This in itself will cause no problems to the operation of the appliance. Hope this helps Thanks Ask Your Own UK Appliance Question Customer reply replied 8 years ago Hi Fred. Will the units be okay as the fitting instructions state heat resistance of up to 95 degrees. Also the wire from the hob has three leads, I believe from the rather brief and confusing manual that one is earth and of the remaining four, they fit as pairs into a three terminal hook up. Does this sound realistic. UK Appliance Technician Techdesk, Field Service Engineer replied 8 years ago Hiya, The wires should be labeled and paired already by the sticky tags on them.

There will be 2 pairs, 1 pair live, the other neutral and then the earth wire. The units should be fine too. The heat from the hob is upward and the oven is insulated so the heat is inside. There is also a cooling fan that takes the heat from outwith the cavity and blows it out the front. Thanks Ask Your Own UK Appliance Question Was this answer helpful. AEG induction hob Hi, just put a hob in my lads new kitchen. AEG induction hob supplied with the Wren units. I cant get it to Hi I have a problem with my Bosch cooker. I cant get it to switch on. There is a key symbol when I try and turn it in. I have a two oven appliance, the bottom oven being a fan oven. Yesterday evening the bottom oven failed although the interior light and fan continue to function. He is buying One of my customers is having a kitchen revamp. He is buying a Neff microwave C57M70N3GB. Will this operate from a normal 13 amp plug plugged into a socket. He is also buying a NEFF oven B45E52N3GB. I have i need to connect two Neff ovens B45E54 and C67P70 . I have a 6mm cable running from the consumer unit. This goes to a switch 13amp and then to a junction box for connecting the cookers. What, if any, are the ventilation requirements for these units. Started all over again. We have a Siemens HB55NB550B Well. We have a Siemens HB55NB550B double oven 60 cms wide which is fitted between two cabinets on the support runners provided. I think I have settled on purchasing a VIA 640 induction hob. It will replace a conventional electric hob which is over an electric oven. I have concerns regarding power supply. Last night I have a Neff integrated fan oven and electric hob. Last night i had the oven preheating and a couple of the hobs on. Whilst i had my back to the oven i saw a flash and heard a loud pop. It had been switched off at the cooker panel while we were away.
